

Supplies

- mirrors (1 per adult or teen helper)

Tip

- Any kind of mirrors you may have likely will work for the activity, but if you have any with a magnifying mirror that makes small details more visible, that's even better!

Look for Unique Facial Features

Say: Today we're learning that God is all-knowing, and that means God knows everything about us—even things we might not know about ourselves. I wonder if there are some things we don't know about our own faces. Let's find out. We might be surprised!

- Form as many groups as you have adult or teen helpers, dividing kids evenly among the groups. Give each leader a mirror.
- Have each group sit in a knee-to-knee circle with kids facing each other.
- Have leaders study their own faces closely, looking for subtle details, and then name one thing. Leaders might notice a freckle, color variations in their eyes, or a new wrinkle! They'll ask everyone in their groups if they can see it, too. It's okay if kids can't see it.
- Have each leader pass the mirror to the child on his or her left and lead the child through the same process. Repeat around the circle. Ensure all kids have at least one turn.

Talk About Our Faces

Ask: • What are some new things you just discovered about your own face?

• Why is it surprising that there are things we might not know about our own faces?

Say: There are lots of things we might not know about ourselves—even grown-ups don't know everything about themselves. There are also special things we don't know about each other.

Tell Something Others Might Not Know About You

- Have leaders start the next round by sharing something about themselves that can't be seen and that others might not know about them, such as a favorite color, favorite food, or something unique or adventurous they've done.
- Then have leaders help each preschooler come up with something unseen to share about themselves. Sticking to favorites might be the easiest answers for preschoolers to think of quickly: favorite colors, foods, stuffed animals, TV programs, or books.

Say: We've discovered something new about our faces that we hadn't noticed before, and we've also learned some new things about each other. But none of this is new to God. God has a/ways known all these things about all of us and so much more! God is all-knowing.

---

Foundations of Faith, Lesson 9: God Knows Jonah Ran Away. Design and base content copyright © Group Publishing, Inc. Licensed for use with 61-100 students. Permission to reproduce granted for local church use only.